From the editor

In 1934, a doubting T. S. Eliot wrote:

*Where is the wisdom we have lost in knowledge?
Where is the knowledge we have lost in information?
The cycles of Heaven in twenty centuries
Bring us farther from God and nearer to the Dust.*

The poet recognized the paradoxical nature of our human existence in time — that all our striving to learn, to grow, to prosper sometimes seems only to trap us in rounds of aimless repetition.

But meditation on the cycles of life, Eliot later realized, could affirm and empower. "History is a pattern of timeless moments," he mused in "Little Gidding," the last of his Four Quartets, in 1942; "... History is now."

I take inspiration from Eliot's words. In gathering the separate parts of this issue together, I consider the cycle of our academic year — what it means to each student and faculty member as they convene once again each fall in the pursuit of learning. I think of its significance to benefactors of the college, as we take stock here at harvest time. I see its echo in the larger circles of our continuing intellectual growth, our individual contributions to the world we inhabit, and the cycles of human and natural history that transcend single lifetimes.

I hope you'll enjoy, as I have, a moment to reflect on the past year in Wesleyan College's history presented here. The current issue of Wesleyan Magazine combines the content of the alumnae magazine with the college's annual report, so that we may bring both to you in the most appealing and economical format. The institutional advancement staff have committed to bring you news of the college and of its alumnae four times a year — alternating in magazine and tabloid form — to keep all of Wesleyan's friends informed. The cost savings of bringing design and prepress functions in-house has allowed us to carry out our plan and increase the color photo content of these publications.

So let us turn our thoughts toward endings and beginnings and in-betweens. As we start the new cycle of the 1996–97 academic year, I read the poet's words again:

*We shall not cease from exploration
And the end of all our exploring
Will be to arrive where we started
And know the place for the first time.*

WESLEYAN'S CHARTER DAY:

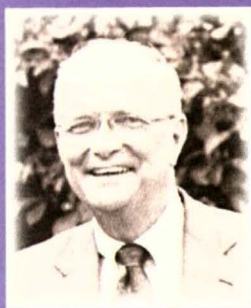

23 DECEMBER 1836

Each year that May and I have spent at Wesleyan has surpassed the previous one in some way, and each has brought its own particular joys and challenges.

The one just finished makes twelve for us. Twelve: the number of hours on the clock face. The number of notes on the scale. Inches in a foot. Months in a year. An even dozen.

With these measures we mark the passing of time and our progress across the cycles of years.

The 1995–96 academic year saw important accomplishments for Wesleyan. Our endowment surpassed the $30 million mark for the first time in history — up from $9 million twelve years ago. Total gifts to the college during 1995–96 exceeded our goal, representing the third consecutive year of record-breaking giving.

But what is important is not the figures themselves, however impressive they may be. It is the differences those dollars make in the lives of young women. The learning those gifts — your gifts — help them acquire. And, in turn, the ways in which those students change the world.

You've read some of their stories in earlier issues

Games.

I want to thank each one of you whose contributions have made these stories of teaching, research, and community service happen.

As I look back over the past twelve months and even further back to the past twelve years, I am proud of the accomplishments of this pioneering institution. And although, as you know, the Ackermans will retire from Wesleyan next year, we

Observations of Ebb & Flow on a Barrier Island

Story, photos, and sketches by Barbara A. Bratton

SIX A.M. IN THE COOL HOUR BEFORE FULL DAYLIGHT, THE ISLAND is quiet except for the soft rustle of a slight breeze through the Spartina marsh, an occasional birdcall, and the croaking of frogs in the trees. White-tailed deer tiptoe across the shell-surfaced road to graze silently beside the ruins of slave cottages. The tide ebbs imperceptibly, like bedclothes slipped back to reveal a taut sheet of slick black mud and scores of waking fiddler crabs.

The peace is broken by the tentative sound of voices and the abrupt sputter of an old flatbed truck. There is much to be done before the tide comes back in, and the young researchers are eager for a taste of field work. While other college students are enjoying their vacations or holding summer jobs or visiting family during the summer break, Wesleyan students Janet Fallon, Amy Daniels, and Brandy Conner are conducting research in marine ecology. Hands-on, honest-to-goodness biological research. Muddy, sweaty, down-and-dirty research.

As students of Wesleyan professor Ronald Toll, the three took contributing a few pieces of the huge puzzle that is being solved, bit by bit, by scholars around the globe."

Diverse interests, diverse backgrounds

Fallon, a junior pursuing a self-designed major in biology and international business, is interested in discovering how commerce and conservation can coexist.

"I'm a devout capitalist," she says wryly. "But if we can achieve the bottom line without destroying the environment, that's what I'm out to learn to do."

Assistant Professor of Biology Barry Rhoades encouraged Fallon to apply for the prestigious Morris K. Udall Scholarship for students who are interested in environmental or tribal issues. She won the $5,000 scholarship as well as a Delta Airlines International Scholarship, and squeezed in the research trip to St. Catherines before leaving to study European economics and politics at Cambridge University.

Daniels is a first-year student who had already gotten her feet wet — literally — on a previous trip to the island. A recipient of a Coca-

Cola Scholarship, Daniels hopes to pursue graduate research in biology. Conner is a senior biology major interested in sports physiology.

An island laboratory

The students took part in two separate long-term studies on St. Catherines Island, a privately owned wildlife preserve and research center off the coast of Georgia. One of Georgia's ancient barrier islands and one of its last unspoiled ecosystems, St. Catherines offers a bounty of opportunities for scientists.

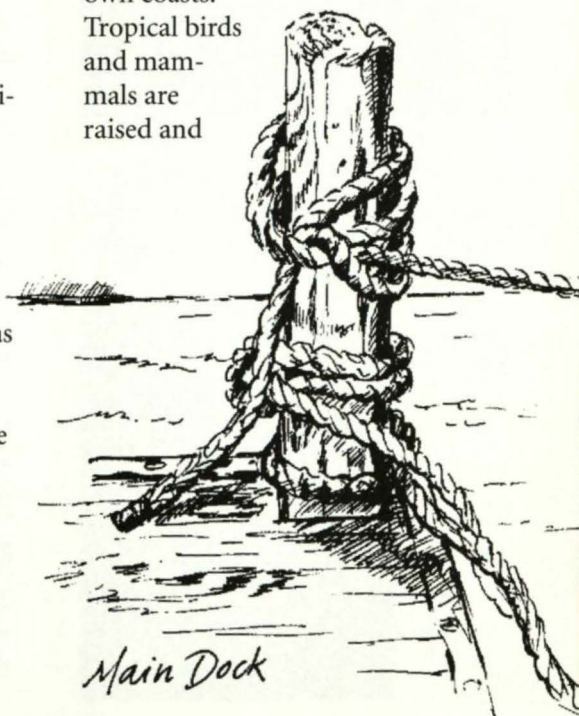

"You don't have to go to Borneo or New Zealand to find new species," Toll observes. "Serious studies of this area have been done for more than 150 years now, but we're still discovering new animals right along our own coasts."

Tropical birds and mammals are raised and advantage this summer of an opportunity rare for undergraduates — to experience scientific discovery at the source. "Getting to do the research not only helps students learn more effectively, but it actually makes them a part of the worldwide scientific community," says Toll, Munroe Professor of Life Sciences and chairman of Wesleyan's Division of Natural Sciences and Math. "They're studied on St. Catherines in cooperation with zoos across the country.

Lemurs, indigenous to Madagascar but now highly endangered there, were introduced to a similar habitat here about ten years ago. American alligators, a native species, bask in a freshwater enclave that contains a large concentration of the reptiles. Dozens of species of plant life abound. And the island's remote tidal waterways, beaches, and marshes provide marine researchers locations where ongoing projects can remain undisturbed for months, even decades.

It is this isolation and absence of human interference that makes St. Catherines ideal for Toll's experiments and for long-term study of marine invertebrate biodiversity. One current study involves a two-year comparison of the type, quantity, and life cycles of fouling organisms that settle onto various underwater surfaces. Toll and his students plan to collect data from a series of placements of plastic tiles, measuring variables such as windward or leeward location, color of substratum, and season of year. Which tiles prove more hospitable to the organisms, black or white? Do the organisms thrive better on the open sound, or in the quiet tidal creek?

And, ultimately, what factors impact on the biodiversity of this island and our world?

That's where Toll's students come in. Tiles have to be mounted on wooden planks with plastic hardware that won't affect the chemistry of the substratum. The boards, in turn, must be mounted where they will remain submerged — attached by shorter boards to the sides of floating dock platforms. And when it comes time to gather results, the boards and tiles have to be removed and replaced with fresh ones for the next month's cycle.

Mud, sweat, and cheers

The students have become as adept with power drills and nut drivers as they were with the formaldehyde and

AQUATIC ABECEDARY: Algae, barnacles, bryozoans, cnidarians, and other "fouling" organisms cling to the experimental tiles.

microscopes they were taught to use back in the college laboratory. "Field work involves not just having your basic science down," says Fallon. "It tests your ingenuity and problem-solving ability, and your organizational skills."

With a little trial and error, students and professor work out an efficient system: unmount the tiles, photograph and preserve the specimens, remount the new tiles, and transport the vanful of specimens back to the Wesleyan campus where lab assistant Conner would analyze them. As the study progresses, other students will have a chance to participate. "If they think they can handle the mud!" warns Daniels.

Ah, yes, the mud. The second of the experiments requires the investigators to locate remote populations of Mercenaria — commercial hard clams, which live on the point bars formed in tidal creeks and are accessible by water or by hiking through the half-liquid marsh.

Toll is testing a novel method for tracking clam migration. By gluing a metal slug to the clam's shell, Toll reasons, it should be possible to find the reburied clam later with a metal detector. So the group gathers several dozen clams from the ooze, outfits them with brass washers, and returns them to their original spot. The next day, after tides have washed over the bar and obscured any evidence of human presence, the metal detector does the trick: like the radio tracking devices used on larger animals, it finds the clams for future study. Of course, clams don't move with quite the speed of fish or birds or mammals, but Toll hopes to demonstrate that, contrary to current belief, they do relocate over time.

"This amazing place"

The proximity of St. Catherines to Wesleyan — it's about a three-hour drive — makes such longer-term studies possible, says Toll, whose research experience on the island dates back a decade. Though there are no longer any full-time residents on the island, there are overnight lodgings and facilities for researchers, and the American Museum of Natural History maintains several laboratories in the compound. Superintendent Royce Hayes (brother of Wesleyan alumna Weize Ann Hayes Wright '73) oversees the island. Its use is restricted to a select group of scientists, and access is only by the St. Catherines research boats.

Toll hopes to involve his Wesleyan students in an even more intensive program, making use of the

Survival and success on St. Catherines

Amy Daniels '99

IN THE TWO TRIPS I have taken to St. Catherines Island, I have gained invaluable knowledge about science as a working and adaptable process. Among other skills, I have learned to survive and successfully maneuver in waist-deep mud! Most importantly, however, I have learned that when doing field research, many accommodations must be made for conditions that cannot be controlled by the researchers, such as weather and tide cycles. The comparatively primitive lab conditions on the island pose challenges that must be met with creativity and ingenuity. It is because of these unpredictable situations that I find field work so enthralling.

FALLON: "Dr. Toll likes to play in the mud. Even though he says it is for the benefit of science, I personally think he just likes it."

St. Catherines Island: Some Random Thoughts

Janet Fallon '97

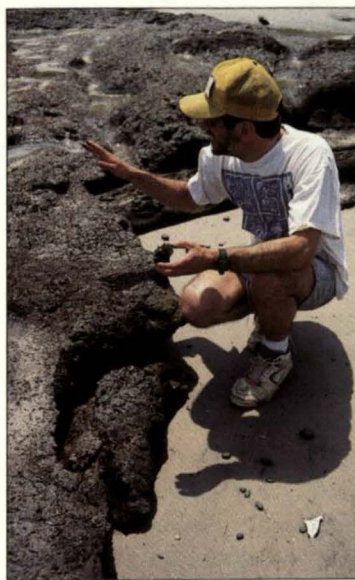

I AM HONORED to have had the opportunity to visit this amazing place. I was able to observe first-hand the dynamic events I had read about in the textbooks. The island is a wonderful teaching source because of the constant dynamic changes in its beaches, marshes, forests, and grasslands. The effects of erosion, the metamorphosis of a freshwater lake into a salt marsh, and the high productivity of the tributary system were all readily observable.

Being a part of the scientific process, working as a team, and sharing ideas about the experiment gave me a great sense of accomplishment. Discussing our ideas, listening to others, and receiving feedback on our thoughts were some of the greatest rewards of the trip.

I was amazed to witness the grandeur of nature, and to be a participant in the microcosm that has been established on this island. The activity and stress of the world only a couple of miles away was alien to St. Catherines. Even with the technology in use today, I felt detached from the "real world." Time runs at a different pace; I was on the island for a weekend, and it felt as if I had been there for weeks. I cannot imagine living on the island for any length of time, let alone being born and raised and dying there like the slaves and plantation owners did during the cotton era . . . .

island and its resources. "St. Catherines is a special place, if you're a dedicated researcher," he observes. "Amy and Janet have really shown the kind of determination it takes. They've had to figure out how to solve problems on their own."

True. They've learned how to prepare, measure, and photograph specimens in the field. They've worked out ways to install experimental apparatus. They've observed the behavior of terrestrial and aquatic animals and seen what the forces of nature have done to the environment. They've been immersed in have laid bare broad stretches of fossil marsh, as Toll explains (left). A few yards farther inland on the beach, trees lie toppled on the sand where erosion has undercut the forested dunes.

continuing discussion of scientific issues.

Lessons of life and death

And they've come away with a deep appreciation for the island's spiritual dimension. On one hot, oppressive afternoon Toll and the students take the flatbed truck deep into the heart of the island to visit the ruins of slave quarters. Passing a gnarled old "slave oak" — a giant tree left standing for shade when a field was cleared for cotton farming — they stop the truck at a row of tabby walls roofless and overgrown with vines. Not even the work of modern-day archaeologists has freed this site of its eerie power. A large buck deer, startled from its cool midday resting place, flees out the back doorway. In the ensuing silence, Amy Daniels ponders how far a fieldhand might have run in vain on this small island a hundred and fifty years ago . . . Janet Fallon contemplates the will of both humans and animals to survive, in the island ecology or in the world we like to think of as civilized.

They return to the mainland and the classroom changed, older, wiser.

RESearch. It's the brass ring for faculty in the big universities. It's what earns scientists Nobel prizes. It's the key component of a graduate education.

But it's also what Wesleyan undergraduates do as an important part of their studies here. Because Wesleyan professors believe that hands-on research in any discipline helps students achieve the objective of a liberal education — to reason critically and independently — they have made it possible for their students to participate in ongoing research projects, opening the door for conference presentations, preparation for grad school, and even scholarly publication.

The following are a few highlights of recent collaborative research activities:

- During fall term 1995, Anna Wilkins did an independent study research project with physics professor Marco Fatuzzo. In her project, Wilkins expanded on the current phase models of the interstellar medium (ISM) by including the effects of star formation and stellar death as sinks and sources of interstellar gas. Anna presented her results during a poster session of the southeastern sectional meeting of the Mathematical Association of America in April 1996, in Huntsville, Alabama. Her poster was titled "A Nonlinear Model of the Interstellar Medium."

The interstellar medium, Fatuzzo explains, is "the collection of gas and dust threaded by magnetic fields that lies in between stars. The ISM is a highly nonlinear and complex dynamical system believed to be composed of independent components (e.g., hot gas, warm gas, and cold clouds) with interchange processes that are regulated in part by supernova remnants. The evolution of these phases can be modeled by a set of coupled nonlinear differential equations, solutions of which provide stable stationary states, limit cycles, and runaway states. Chaotic states have also been found by imposing external periodic forces on the medium."

- Associate Professor of Communications Cindy Buell directed the 1996

departmental honors thesis of Aimée Morris, a summa cum laude graduate in communication. Morris's thesis, "Using Social Marketing and Roper's Health Communication Wheel in the Creation of a Health Communication Campaign," was designed to promote breast cancer awareness and early prevention/detection measures in college-age women. She plans to pursue a master's degree in communication from Georgia State University.

- Tessa Williams, a senior majoring in sociology, and Assistant Professor of Sociology Michael Lewis were co-presenters at the annual meeting of the Society for Applied Sociology in October 1996 in Atlanta. Their paper was on teaching cultural diversity in sociology through the use of critical reasoning.

Lewis notes that "writing this paper has given Tessa a chance to question her beliefs on the role of values in sociological work and has provided me with some teaching tools I can use in future courses." The team will consider feedback from the other sociologists at the meetings and then revise their presentation for journal submission.

- Assistant Professor of Chemistry Glenda Ferguson collaborated with several of her students on three different papers at the 211th Annual American Chemical Society National Meeting in New Orleans last spring: with Kara Bollmeier and Yehudi Self-Medlin, Melissa English, Kathy Worley, and Yehudi Self-Medlin, "Understanding the Competition between Elimination and Substitution Reactions with HyperCard." Bollmeier is a senior double-majoring in chemistry and biology; English, Self-Medlin, and Worley all graduated in May 1996.

- Although psychology professor Helen Hollis is on sabbatical this year, Kim Benoit, a junior psychology major, is assisting her in a study of medication-related beliefs among adolescent inpatients. Benoit is interested in pursuing a Ph.D. in medical psychology. She has already collected data from subjects at the Macon Youth Development Center, run an updated literature search, and started coding and entering data for analysis. "My plan is for us to read the current literature together and have her assist in the preparation of the manuscript for publication. If we continue on schedule, we should be able to submit a paper by Christmas," says Hollis. "It is serendipitous that I was working in an area that matched Kim's interests. Her enthusiasm for the project is contagious."

When Marcella Cranford graduated from college, she was told she should forget her dreams of becoming a veterinarian. But it was not her financial or academic situation that almost discouraged her from applying to vet school. It was her gender that kept her out of the select group of predominantly male students at the University of Tennessee.

It's now nearly twenty years later, and Cranford is speaking to a different sort of select group. There is a gender requirement, but it's a different one — and it's for a different reason. These forty middle school girls from across the Southeast have been selected to study math and science on the Wesleyan College campus and at Oak Ridge National Laboratory through Wesleyan's Spectacles Camp in an attempt to make up for the academic discouragement that pre-teenage girls commonly experience.

Cranford, who received her doctorate of veterinary medicine in 1982, uses her education and talent with animals to educate students about wildlife. "I have to be honest, when I was your age, I couldn't even think about going to vet school," Cranford told Wesleyan's Math and Science Spectacles campers at mountaintop refuge Freil's Cabin in Oak Ridge, Tennessee, on a rainy summer evening.

A Nucleus for Learning

The hike up to Freil's Cabin was only a small part of a four-day east Tennessee field trip, packed with learning and experimentation.

Spectacles is a learning-intensive math and science camp for middle-school girls, now in its sixth year. The camp is sponsored by Wesleyan College and the Oak Ridge National Laboratory (ORNL). Spending three days studying at Oak Ridge has been a Spectacles tradition since the program's inception.

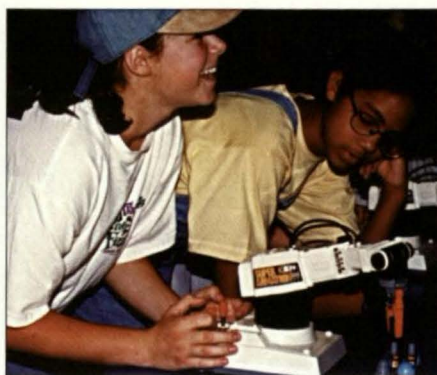

This year, it began with a visit to the Tennessee Aquarium in Chattanooga, home to more than 7,000 animals, including more than 400 species of fish, reptiles, amphibians, birds, and mammals.

The next morning, the girls were treated to a canine demonstration in Oak Ridge by the Knox County Sheriff's Department, during which officers Dwight Webb and Lester Mullins showed Spectacles girls how trained dogs sniff out contraband and suspects.

Later, the girls visited the American Museum of Science and Energy, where Pat Fitchpatrick of ORNL demonstrated robotics and taught a brief stream wildlife course before the class headed to a nearby creek to study its ecology firsthand. They gathered salamanders and bugs, measured the stream pools, and tested the pH level of the water.

Keeping a hands-on focus to the learning activities is an important part of the camp's success, said Donna James Jackson '93, the camp's director of extracurricular activities. Jackson teaches fourth grade at Macon's Sonny Carter Elementary School. "They like to discover things on their own," she said. "A lot of times we don't give the kids enough credit. We try to be dispensers of knowledge, but we need to be facilitators of knowledge. They want the hands-on experience."

The next day, they returned to the museum for an energy show, where volunteers from the Spectacles audience learned through a hair-raising experience how a Van de Graaff electrostatic generator works.

The trip ended with the Oak Ridge Historic Tour, highlighted by a look inside the Graphite Reactor. The reactor was essential to the Manhattan Project, now well known as the code name for the atom-bomb project that ended World War II. The Spectacles group visited control rooms and saw where elements were loaded into the reactor to create the first plutonium and uranium.

"Girls in the Middle"

The Spectacles Camp is a two-week residential experience on the Wesleyan campus, where campers attend participation-driven classes every weekday. Campers study biology, physical science, chemistry, and math through experimentation. About eighty students attended two sessions during summer 1996. Each group traveled to Oak Ridge. The camp is open to rising sixth-, seventh-, and eighth-grade girls who have shown interest and aptitude in math and science.

Campers must be nominated to attend the camp by their teachers. Campers with financial need receive scholarships to attend.

Spectacles parallels the college's interest in encouraging women in the underrepresented areas of mathematics and science, said Priscilla Danheiser, dean of the college and the program's founder and director.

The camp originated in 1991, after studies showed that high-school girls take significantly fewer mathematics and science courses than boys. Researchers found that the achievement level of boys and girls in math and science in elementary school does not differ significantly, but the achievement level of high school boys and girls does. Studies show that students who don't begin studying algebra by ninth grade are not likely to take college preparatory math courses or attend college at all.

As a result of research by the National Education Association, educators have pinpointed middle school years as a particularly crucial time for students with a possible interest in math and science careers.

"We need to keep girls interested in math and science because if they stop taking those courses in high school, a significant number of career doors will be closed to them in college," Danheiser said. In 1990, the U.S. Department of Energy published its "Math/Science Education Action Conference Report," which suggests that the mission of the Department is "in jeopardy" because schools are not graduating scientifically literate female and minority graduates. Recently, the American Association of University Women published "Girls in the Middle," which reaffirms beliefs that most girls determine their interest levels in math and science at the middle-school age.

Providing the Pathways

Oak Ridge's program administrator of the Office of University and Science Education, Peggy King, praised Spectacles for providing pathways to math and science careers for women. "Oak Ridge is committed to programs that ensure the workforce of qualified science and technology professionals. We are targeting minorities and girls," she said. "We need to show them science is fun.

"It is so important that we bring more women into these high-level careers, and showing these girls there are women working here at Oak Ridge in the labs helps get the message across."

Danheiser says that Oak Ridge's goals are similar to Wesleyan's. "Since one of their goals was to increase the number of minorities and women going into

A Spectac-ular Heritage

While Wesleyan professors and alumnae taught Spectacles campers in the classrooms and laboratories, Wesleyan graduates directed field trips and activities and served as role models.

Donna James Jackson '93, a fourth-grade teacher at Sonny Carter Elementary School in Macon, has served as director or assistant director for Spectacles since 1993.

"I do this because I really do enjoy it," she said. "I plan on going into administration and supervision, and this gives me a chance to see that age group in action and plan activities for them."

Camp Director and Dean of the College Priscilla Danheiser says that Wesleyan alumnae and students provide a rich pool of applicants for the program. "We are fortunate to have some very talented students with interests in middle school education, in math and science, or in working with young people," she said.

Teaching experience attracted most of the '96 camp's employees. Susan Horton '95 and Erinn Guice '95 were each taking summer breaks from teaching certification programs at West Georgia College.

"Working at Spectacles Camp fits in with my goals as a teacher," said Horton, who has worked at the camp for five consecutive summers. "Plus, I think it's important to encourage girls to get involved in math and science."

Tanya Finney '96 began a teaching job in a public high school this fall and wanted a warm-up before entering the classroom. "It's helping me prepare for the classroom, because I feel I already know where the students' mindsets are," she said.

Sharon Brim '96 is pursuing a Ph.D. in math at the University of Florida. "I was a computer science minor and plan to teach someday at university level, but enjoy working with the girls."

Stephanie Ross '95, had just completed her first year of medical school at the Medical College of Georgia this past summer. "I really enjoyed speaking with the girls and telling them about medical school. It's important to encourage them, and they're at a good age because they're making up their minds what they want to do with the rest of their lives," she said.

In addition to alumnae, two Wesleyan students worked at the camp. Shannon McGinley '99 of Eustis, Florida, and Carrie Walker '99 of Peachtree City, Georgia, saw the job as a new challenge. "I love to work with kids. It's a great up for them and also for me. I want to do this again next year," said Walker, an elementary education major. McGinley saw the position as an alternative to spending the summer in an office job.

"This is much more enjoyable and rewarding," she said.

these (math and science) fields during the critical middle-school period, our missions coincided," she said.

Instructors include Wesleyan faculty members Todd Finley, assistant professor of language arts education; Glenda Ferguson, assistant professor of chemistry; and Barry Rhoades, assistant professor of biology. Two alumnae, Dana Grinstead Tanner '86 and Jennifer Monjeau '93, also taught classes.

B. J. Dumas, who has been teaching at Spectacles for the past five years, said that the '96 campers were "more interested than last year's.

"Ninety percent seemed to enjoy it," she added. "They're really getting involved."

A high school biology teacher for thirty years, Dumas says Spectacles campers don't behave much differently in the classroom than her own students. "In many respects, they're not that different," she said. "You have to have a variety of things to keep them interested. But they're doing the kinds of things that ninth-graders do in physical science class."

But how many are aspiring scientists? "I'm not sure," she said. "But I'll bet most of them will pursue careers in math and science, because they all seem to have inquiring minds, and that's what it takes to be a scientist.

"They just needed a chance." ■

King talked of her own struggles as a woman in a science career. Fitchpatrick later taught a brief course in stream ecology before leading the campers into the woods to study a nearby stream.

Wesleyan Helps Welcome the World to the 1996 Olympic Games

FIVE HUNDRED college cheerleaders from across the country this past summer converged on Wesleyan's campus to practice for what was surely the biggest show ever produced in Atlanta.

The National Association of Cheerleading gathered its best to perform in the Opening Ceremonies for the Centennial Olympic Games in Atlanta. NCA chose Wesleyan College because of its on-campus housing and convenient, discreet location. For two weeks during July, the Soccer Field and Quad were sites of endless practicing. The cheerleaders slept in dorms, ate in Anderson Dining Hall, and frequently traveled by bus to Atlanta for rehearsals during the two weeks before the Atlanta Games officially began on July 19.

Early that afternoon, the young men and women dressed in their bright yellow cheerleading uniforms with "Atlanta" splashed across their tops. Tension and excitement radiated from them as they boarded their chartered buses in the parking lot adjacent to the campus tennis courts.

DID YOU KNOW?

♦ Equestrian athletes at the Paralympic Games in August used several of Wesleyan's horses in competition.

During the Opening Ceremonies, the cheerleaders did stunts and danced to the song "Atlanta's Welcome to the World," which was composed by Jimmy "Jam" Harris and Terry Lewis. Harris and Lewis are one of pop music's top-producing teams. They have written and produced material for more than forty singles and albums that have been certified gold or platinum.

NCA asked that the Wesleyan community refrain from publicizing their visit, but allowed a small audience at their practices. The group of performers consisted of cheerleaders from twenty colleges across the country, including the University of Georgia, Georgia Institute of Technology, Florida State University, the University of Nebraska, Ohio State University, Sacramento State University, Boston College, North Carolina State University, and the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

As part of the Host Campus Network of the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games, Wesleyan was pleased to have hosted this impressive group of young people. Wesleyannes and friends of the college contributed to the success of the Games in other ways, too:

• A Wesleyan alumna had a hand in the Opening Ceremonies. J. Barkley Russell '68 was a cast assistant for the Opening Ceremonies, a member of the Atlanta Press Club's Olympic Committee involving hospitality for visiting journalists, and a volunteer in the International

The Year in Giving

EACH YEAR as I read again the lists of names of those who give to Wesleyan College, I am amazed and moved by the outpouring of support for this institution. The dollars you give not only underwrite the operation of the college, they also provide encouragement and inspiration for all who work and study here at Wesleyan. I thank each of you for your support.

Fiscal year 1996 was again a record-setter for fundraising. Your gifts over the past year have enlarged the endowment, improved the physical plant of the college, supported classroom and laboratory instruction, provided scholarships for outstanding students, and assisted in a myriad of ways that are essential to the Wesleyan experience.

I am proud of all that has been accomplished through your gifts this year. Our campus is in the best condition in recent years, with better-equipped science labs, an educational resource center, a high-tech computer linkage to a local school, and air conditioning in every dorm room. I am especially pleased with the progress of the Society for the Twenty-First Century, the organization of individuals who support Wesleyan through planned gifts. The Society has far surpassed our original membership goal of 100, with a current roll of 230 members.

Don Welch, my predecessor as vice president for advancement and founder of the Society for the Twenty-First Century, had graciously stayed on a number of years after his retirement to work part time with the Society as assistant to the president for gift planning. The rapid growth of our planned giving program now requires that someone be available at the college on a full-time basis to assist our benefactors; I am therefore adding planned giving to my responsibilities. I welcome the opportunity to talk with any of you who would be interested in putting Wesleyan in your will, creating an annuity, or looking at any other form of planned gift. Current Society members, please note the date of January 24 on your calendars for our 1997 celebration dinner; invitations will be mailed in late December. You will not want to miss this year's guest speaker: Bob Steed, attorney, humorist, and husband of alumna Lu McElroy Steed '58.

In another staff change, I am delighted to welcome to Wesleyan Lynn Shields, our new director of development. Lynn comes to us from Tulane University where she served as annual fund director for nine colleges of the university. Lynn says that her work with Newcomb College provided excellent preparation for coming to Wesleyan and working with the alumnae of a college for women.

We appreciate the support manifested in every gift received for this college. You are a vital part of Wesleyan's progress, and we thank each of you.

- In addition to Wesleyan tennis coach Jaime Kaplan and former president of the Wesleyan Alumnae Association Kathy A. Bradley '78 (see Wesleyan College News, Summer '96), Sally Bowen '47 participated in the Olympic Torch festivities. Featured in an Atlanta Journal-Constitution column by Dave Kindred, Bowen was chosen to deliver the speech in Newnan welcoming the flame and explaining its symbolism on the day before the Olympics (see story, page CN8).

- Trustees William M. Matthews and Chris R. Sheridan, Jr. and Associates Henry C. Whitfield and H. Averett Walker, all of Macon, participated in the torch run.

- Bernice M. Isaac '87 worked on the security team in the Main Press Center for ACOG. "I could not have asked for a better volunteer assignment," Isaac said.

- Mary Jo Moody '64 of Marietta hosted dignitaries from Nevis/St. Kitts during the Games.

- Roslyn Atkinson Harden '49 worked on the security team at the tennis venue at Stone Mountain; Helen Poole Fontsero '59 of Decatur worked the equestrian events at the Conyers venue. Atlantan Ginny Slack '73 assisted at three venues, including the Wolf Creek shooting course and the Ocoee River rafting course, then volunteered in the Paralympic Games. Savannah residents Carol Rogers Smith '71 and husband Clark helped coordinate the yachting events. Hale Coble Edwards '73 of Richmond, Virginia, worked at the synchronized swimming sports information center.

- Lyubena Savova Smith '93 served as a volunteer linguist for international Olympic visitors to Macon, and Virve Paul Martin '52 of Atlanta served as an Olympic attaché for the country of Estonia, acting as liaison between ACOG and the Estonian National Olympic Committee.

- Penny Thomas '74 presented a lecture-recital entitled "Women Players — Celebrating Women in the Arts" as part of the Olympic celebration.

Class Notes

1920s

Aurelia Cooper Evans '24 of Perry, Georgia, keeps in touch with several members of her late sister Martha Cooper's class of '31 including Martha Pate Allen of Winter Haven, Florida; Claire Carter Malone of Thomasville, Georgia; and Martha Mayo Lane of New Orleans, Louisiana. Condolences to Claire on the death of her grandchild, and to Martha Lane on the death of her husband.

1930s

Evelyn Edwards Sutlive '31 of Milledgeville, Georgia, writes that she enjoys spending time with her grandchildren and great-grandchildren. They helped her celebrate her 86th birthday. Evelyn has fond memories of Wesleyan and occasionally sings "Follow the Gleam."

Margaret Murphey Martin '33 was featured recently in a Macon Telegraph news article about Camp Martha Johnston, a Girl Scout camp in Macon. Margaret reminisced about her experiences there as a camper in the '20s and later as camp director.

Thalia Johnson Gooch '35 and her husband, S. D., were co-honored as Pioneer of the Year in Lake Wales, Florida, recently. Their son, Stapleton, told each parent that the other was to be honored at the city's celebration. Imagine their surprise to find that both were to be honored for their contributions to the history and progress of their community. Thalia's father was a founding father of Lake Wales. The Gooches have another son and two daughters.

From Thomasville, Georgia, Gladys Johnston Wilson '39 writes that although many years have passed, she still has happy thoughts of her days at Wesleyan. She and husband Robert have been married for 55 years. They have two sons, John and Robert, III. Their oldest granddaughter gave birth to their first great-grandchild, John Riley Wise.

1940s

Augusta, Georgia, resident Lilly Lake Stephenson '43 enjoyed reading her July issue of the Wesleyan College News. Lilly identified students in a photo that appeared in the magazine as members of the 1943 physical education class that included her soccer teammates: Betty Liipfert Hewes '43, Mary Belle Gardner Quesenberry '43, Elizabeth Stillwell Barron '43, and Dagna Peterson.

Twenty years ago, Sally Bowen '47 travelled to Olympia, Greece, the site of the first Olympics, after earning a master's degree in the Greek classics. In July 1996, "Olympia came to her." As keynote speaker for the city of Newnan, Georgia, Sally welcomed the Olympic flame and its entourage as it made its way through Newnan. She had taught Latin for 45 years, and the townspeople felt she was the appropriate person to deliver the speech. She spoke of "fire and passion, hopes and dreams, power and glory, and the spirit that inspires us to raise heroes on our shoulders and shed tears at their triumphs." In July, "Miss Sally's" story was featured in an editorial column in the Atlanta Journal and Constitution (see story, page CN8).

Libba Harman Woodall '48 sends greeting from Woodland, Georgia, and a news article from the Atlanta Journal and Constitution concerning Wesleyan alumna, poet, artist and teacher Loula Kendall Rogers, Class of 1857. Cited as Upson County's "great heroine," Loula chronicled her life and times through diaries which she began at the age of ten. Her diaries make up a 21,000-piece collection at Emory University. In her native Thomaston, Georgia, an archival center is being created to house some of her collected writings, journals and memorabilia.

1950s

Ann Hawkins Brosnan '52 of Asheville, North Carolina, enjoyed a visit from classmates Jean Armstrong Smith, Nancy Lewis Montet, Martha Davis Bauman, and Peggy Thoroughman Callahan in June. Members of the Class of '52 are looking forward to their big "45th" next April.

Charlotte Battle Everbach '52 of Winter Park, Florida, had the distinct pleasure of having an artist's studio in the Atlantic Center for the Arts named in her honor. The Charlotte Battle Everbach Painting & Drawing Studio opened in 1995. Charlotte was a founding member of Atlantic Center and has been a member of the board of trustees since 1980. "Because of her enthusiasm and her belief in the mission of the studio, she inspires everyone," said Jim Pugh, who donated the money to build the studio. Charlotte is an interior designer and a former member of the board of trustees of the Orlando Museum of Art and the board of visitors of the Cornell Museum.

Fort Valley, Georgia, resident Claire Houser '53, who is a reading specialist, authored and performed her one-woman show "Two Women: Rebecca and Scarlett" for Midsummer Macon 1996 held at Wesleyan College in July.

Susan Thigpen McDuffie '53 and her daughter, pianist Dr. Margery McDuffie, presented the 1996 MidSummer Macon Musical Finale to an enthusiastic audience in Wesleyan's Porter Auditorium in July. Susan stays busy teaching private piano. Active in Macon's musical community, she serves on the boards of the Macon Symphony and Morning Music Club, among others. Susan also travels frequently to hear her son, renowned violinist Robert McDuffie, in concert.

In July, Neva Langley Fickling '55 of Macon and Edward Eikner, Comer Professor of Fine Arts at Wesleyan, entertained the MidSummer Macon audience at the college with their program, "A Piano Serenade."

An exhibit of watercolors by Anna Kay Singley '56 of Columbia, South Carolina, was held in the East Gallery of Porter Auditorium during MidSummer Macon 1996. Anna Kay also taught a class in watercolor for the July arts program held at Wesleyan.

Peggy Miller Nelson '57 was a delegate to the South Georgia Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church, held on Wesleyan's campus in June. She writes of how beautiful the campus looked, especially the stately magnolia trees around the Mount Vernon Porch area. Peggy lives in Dublin, Georgia, where her husband and two sons practice law; her daughter lives nearby with her family. The Nelsons have five grandchildren. Peggy still sings for weddings—two in June. She keeps in touch with Wesleyan friends and classmates and reports that she flew to Michigan recently for a visit with Betty Brabston Ballard '57, and talked to Jimmie Copeland North '57, who lost her husband, Henry, last spring. Jimmie is an artist and political activist in St. Simons Island, Georgia. Classmate Floreida Judge Harrell '57 lives nearby in Warner Robins, where she works with the Miss America program. Peggy also keeps in touch with Maconite Julian J. Creamer '63, who owns Creamers Body Shop and is a sailboat enthusiast. She sometimes sees Nina Sheppard Terrell '58 of Macon and Kay Lough Neely '57 of Milledgeville.

1960s

In Littleton, Colorado, Patricia Shriver Mancuso '60 has had a busy summer. She finished her LPN program, started a new job as a nurse, grew a wonderful big garden (for the first time in thirteen years), sent her daughter back to summer school, helped her son move to Western State College, and attended her 40th high school reunion in Palm Beach, Florida. At the reunion she renewed high school and Wesleyan friendships with Betsy Bishop Shipley '60, who lives and teaches in Lincoln, Nebraska, and spends summers in Colorado, and with Leah Tamplin Leigh '60, who now lives in St. Augustine, Florida. Patricia recently had lunch with Laura Aylor Martin '53 in Fort Collins, Colorado, where she also renewed a Wesleyan connection with Susan Stankrauff Newman '57, who also lives in Fort Collins. Patricia is looking forward to a trip to Greece in October.

Marsha Harris Rudolph '62 of Valdosta, Georgia, announces the birth of her first grandchild on May 15, 1996—Coleman Harris Rudolph. His parents are Marsha's younger son, Coleman, and his wife, Shannon. Her older son, Russ, and his wife, Megan, live in Spartanburg, South Carolina, where Russ is an engineer with Milliken.

Becky Johnson Jobson '64 lives in Covington, Georgia. She has three children: Carrie Jobson Brigham, Rob Jobson, and Paul Jobson. Becky notes that she has three "grand dogs," too. Our sympathy goes to Becky on the death of her husband (see Deaths).

Maconite Nancy Roland Rehberg '66, voice instructor at Mercer University, taught all voice lessons for the 1996 MidSummer Macon Music Camp at Wesleyan.

Jean Barkley Russell '68 of Fairburn, Georgia, had a busy "Olympic" summer. She served as a cast assistant for the Opening Ceremonies of the Olympic Games and was a member of the Atlanta Press Club's Olympic Committee, which provided hospitality and a resource center for visiting journalists. She also worked with the International Broadcast Center and the Southern International Press Center as a volunteer for the Atlanta Convention and Visitors Bureau (see photo, page 13). Jean's eighty-year-old mother's dance company, the Doris Russell Performing Company, was chosen to perform at the Opening Ceremonies—she still teaches daily tap lessons and has no plans of retiring. Jean has founded her own marketing and public relations firm, the Barkley Russell Agency. She has two sons: Pete, a student at the Medical College of Georgia; and Alex, a graduate of the University of Georgia.

Julie Shingler Dunaway '69 resides in Thomson, Georgia, where she is a vocational evaluator and the Thomson office manager for the East Central Georgia Easter Seals Society. Husband Roger is a practicing attorney and recently was elected judge of the superior courts for the Toombs judicial circuit. They have three children: daughter Shannon, a graduate of the University of Georgia, teaches English; son Trey is working on his MBA at Vanderbilt University; and son Dave attends the University of Georgia.

Susan Ewing Maddox '69 of Macon was awarded the Columbia/HCA Humanitarian Award for her volunteer work at Coliseum Breast Health Center, a part of Columbia Coliseum Medical Centers in Macon. She also founded a Chronic Fatigue Syndrome Support Group at the Hospital.

1970s

The Reverend Charlene Payne Kammerer '70 is used to being first. She was the first woman ordained as a United Methodist minister in Florida and the first to be a district superintendent. And this summer at Lake Junaluska, North Carolina, the Rev. Kammerer was elected the first female bishop of the Southeastern Jurisdictional Conference. Having served as senior pastor of St. Paul's United Methodist Church in Tallahassee, Florida, since 1993, Bishop Kammerer has been assigned to the Western North Carolina Conference.

Gena Roberts Franklin '71 and her husband, George, served as members of the host committee for "An Evening of Old South Hospitality" to benefit the Cannonball House in Macon. The house now serves as a museum with many period artifacts and antiques including displays of objects from the parlors at Wesleyan College where the first two sororities, Phi Mu and Alpha Delta Pi, were founded.

During the Olympics, Hale Coble Edwards '73 of Richmond, Virginia, worked at the synchronized swimming sports information desk at the Olympic Aquatic Center. Daughter Katie, 17, is a nationally ranked junior synchronized swimmer and placed eighth in a solo competition at the national age group meet in Seattle this year. Son James is twelve and loves soccer and basketball. Hale writes that she and husband James and all the family had a wonderful Olympic experience.

In Perry, Georgia, Grace Harris Cook '74 has been elected regent general of the Daniel Stewart Chapter DAR.

"My family's Olympic experience was a very positive one," writes Sally Moffett McKenna '75 of Tucker, Georgia. During the Olympics, Sally hosted the biggest house party she's ever had. Her guests included classmates Deborah Bell Roberds '75 of Savannah, Georgia, and Marina Showalter Chancery '75 of Century, Florida, and their families (five teenagers and one preteen!).

Suzanne Sprague Rogers '78 and husband Bill have bought and renovated an old home in West Palm Beach, Florida. According to classmate Laurel Farish '78 of Marietta, Georgia, the home and its gardens are a showplace!

Janice Pyron Wagoner '78 of Macon returned to Wesleyan in 1994 and received a teaching certificate in ECE (P-5). She was named "Teacher of the Year" at Brookdale Elementary in Macon after completing her first year of teaching!

During September, Mary McMillan Mancin '78 of Bartow, Georgia, and her husband traveled to England and Scotland. While in Scotland, they attended the International Gathering of the Clan McMillan at Finlaystone House, home of the chief of the Clan McMillan. Mary is choir director at Louisville Presbyterian Church and serves as events coordinator for Bartow Community Center. A member of the Jefferson County Historical Society, she is also active in other community organizations. The Wesleyannes and the Wesleyan Concert Choir performed in Bartow last December.

1980s

Patricia Chapman DuBose '81 of Saint Marys, Georgia, received her master of education in science from the University of North Florida on August 2, 1996.

Jane Estes '81 lives in Macon, where she is an elementary music teacher for Bibb County Public Schools. In July, Jane taught music theory for MidSummer Macon 1996 held at Wesleyan College. She also works with the Bibb County Honor Choir program with Lisa Elliott Schmidt '80, who directs the choir.

Bernice M. Isaac '87 of Marietta, Georgia, is a UPC Analyst at Home Depot, where she represents her department in their service organization, "Team Depot." That team was recognized by President Clinton with a presidential service award. This summer, Bernice was an ACOG volunteer during the Olympic Games. She is also a volunteer on the Family Selection Committee with Habitat for Humanity. Last year, Bernice helped several families move from public housing. Over the summer she visited with Roz Evans '88 and Elizabeth Hasty Sutton '86.

Maconite Mary Beth Brown Swearingen '89 was "spotlighted" by the Macon Chamber of Commerce for her volunteer work as an ambassador for the Chamber. A trustee for the Macon

Heritage Foundation, Mary Beth is also active in her church, volunteers regularly with a local nursing home, and serves on several United Way committees. She is a provider relations representative for managed care in the Central Georgia market for Blue Cross/Blue Shield. Mary Beth also finds time to help the Wesleyan Alumnae Office each quarter with "Class Notes" for the alumnae news. (Thank you, Mary Beth!)

1990s

Shantras Lakes '90 of College Park, Georgia, is coordinator of children and family programs at the High Museum of Art in Atlanta where she helped to develop programs surrounding the "Rings" exhibit—the High Museum of Art's Olympic Arts festival exhibition (see photo, page CNI).

Lizzie Wahab '91 and husband Faisal have moved back to Macon, where she works as an admissions representative for Wesleyan. Lizzie is delighted to be working with other alumnae in admissions—Annette Nassir '94, who moved to Macon from Portland Oregon, and Patrenice Guthrie Thomas '96 (see Class of 1996 notes), who is a traveling representative.

Birmingham, Alabama, resident Tina Edler James, M.D. '91 was selected as Chief Resident for the Family Practice Residency at Medical Center East in Birmingham. Her husband, Kevin, is a student at Cumberland School of Law at Samford University.

Jennifer A. Johnson '92 graduated from Columbia Seminary in May and was ordained as a minister of the Word and Sacrament in the Presbyterian Church (USA) in July. She is pastor of First Presbyterian Church in Okolona, Mississippi, where she resides.

Congratulations to Dr. Dena K. Long '92 of Jacksonville, Florida. She has completed her medical training in veterinary medicine.

In Columbus, Georgia, Emily Adams Flock '93 and Ruth Powell '93 hosted an August dinner for area first-year students and current students at B. Merrell's Restaurant.

In Macon, Nyssa Horton Hattaway '93 taught art history and visual arts classes for young people during MidSummer Macon 1996 at Wesleyan.

Lyubena Savova Smith '93 of Macon served as a volunteer linguist for international visitors who came to Macon during the Olympics. This effort was part of the Culture Connection, a service of the Macon-Bibb County Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Maconite Lisa Rodriguez Fountain '94 taught creative writing and theater classes during MidSummer Macon 1996 at Wesleyan.

Lisa Marousky '94 passed the November 1995 Certified Public Accountant exam on her first attempt—something only 20% of test-takers accomplish on their first try. Lisa earned her master's degree in accounting in December 1995 from the University of Florida.

Wendy N. Nembhard '94 of Seabrook, Texas, will receive a master's degree in public health in December from the University of Texas.

Staci D. Lynn '95 is back in Gainesville, Florida, where she is a marketing assistant at Koss-Olinger Financial Group. Her son, Trystan (now three-years-old), is in pre-kindergarten. In November, Staci will celebrate her birthday in Cancun, Mexico, with classmate Angel Robinson '95.

Sharon R. Brim '96 is a teaching assistant at the University of Florida in Gainesville, Florida, where she is working on a master's degree in math.

Diane Day-Balch '96 of Duluth, Georgia, is in graduate school at Georgia State University, where she is studying neurobiology and behavior.

Melissa English '96 is a first-year student at Mercer University Medical School in Macon.

Roommates Jena Frazier '96, Beth Milstead '96, and Elizabeth Mathis '96 live in Macon. Both Jena and Beth are reporters for the Daily Sun in Warner Robins, Georgia. Elizabeth works as administrative assistant for the Center for the Arts and MidSummer Macon at Wesleyan.

Working as an affiliate assistant with Gwinnett County Habitat for Humanity, Yehudi Self-Medlin '96 enjoys her VISTA assignment. She and roommate Dahlia Wharton '96, who works in Atlanta at Georgia Surgical Associates, live in Lithonia, Georgia.

Aimée Morris '96 of Bremen, Georgia, is a public relations consultant at the Haralson County Family Connection, and is working on her master of arts in communication at Georgia State University.

Sherry V. Neal '96, Wesleyan's first national Phi Kappa Phi scholarship winner, lives in Athens, Georgia, where she attends the University of Georgia Law School.

Susan M. Selensky '96 works at the Printed Page in Macon and is working on her M.B.A. at Mercer University. Her roommate, Beth Hodges '96, is the production assistant/designer for Bright Ideas Group of Macon.

Patrenice Guthrie Thomas '96 is a new traveling admissions representative for Wesleyan College. Patrenice's recent wedding included many Wesleyannes: Elizabeth Banowski '95 of Columbus, Georgia, was maid of honor. Amy Anderson '98 of Alma, Georgia, Donna David '98 of Alpharetta, Georgia, Stephanie Russ '95 of Pearson, Georgia, and Susan Wheelis '95 of Memphis, Tennessee, were bridesmaids. Betty Lo '95 of Atlanta was a soloist. Jamie Tyson Dodd '35 of Macon, Patrenice's alumnae candlelighter, also attended. The church was decorated with ribbons that denoted special seating for Wesleyan friends. Patrenice and her husband, Channing, reside in Macon (see Marriages).

Shorter honors Wesleyan Alumna Dr. Emma Lewis Lipps

Shorter College paid tribute to Dr. Emma Lewis Lipps '40 during a memorial service Sept. 17. Dr. Lipps, 77, died on July 19, 1996. The service was held in Brookes Chapel on the Shorter College campus.

"Dr. Lipps' influence was far-reaching," said Dr. Larry McSwain, president of Shorter College. "She taught at Shorter for more than forty years, was instrumental in getting Marshall Forest designated as a national landmark, and was dedicated to educating others of the importance of ecology and the earth. She cared about the planet long before there was an Earth Day and before recycling was popular."

Dr. Lipps retired in 1989 as distinguished professor of biology and earth science emerita.

Margaret Duckworth Sewell '49 represented Wesleyan at the memorial service; Shorter colleague Paulina Buhl Noble '52 also attended.

Interns are Winners by Helen Harwell Smith '67

When Wesleyan alumnae sponsor Wesleyan students as interns, it's a win-win situation — for both student and employer. Students have an opportunity to test career interests, see Wesleyan women at work, try out new cities, and experience after-college work environments during the internship. Alumnae take pride in the younger "sisters" and have the chance to give a little something back to the college. And, of course, they gain genuine assistance from bright, energetic students.

The possibilities for internships are as varied as the careers and interests of alumnae. Over the past few years Wesleyan alumnae have employed students in a wide variety of intern experiences, from observing activities at a brokerage firm to following a surgeon through rounds to assisting with the daily work of a marketing CEO. Internships may vary in length from a few days to several weeks.

One recent internship allowed two students to work on a fully staged production of Puccini's opera La Bohème. Betty Chih Huang '71 and I, as part of the Opera International advisory board (of which Betty is chair), sponsored Cammie Backus '99 and Lisa Dowell '99 as interns with the Washington, D.C.-based opera company. Cammie, a theater student, and Lisa, a voice student, spent three weeks backstage managing the props for the rehearsals and performances of the show. The production included international artists in the principal roles, adult and children choruses, a full orchestra, costumes, professional sets, subtitles and more than two hundred props.

According to the reviewer for the Washington Post, this year's production was "one of the most enjoyable performances of La Bohème I have heard in years, with fresh voices, thoughtful, detailed stage direction, and a spirit of camaraderie that goes to the heart of what this opera is all about." And Wesleyan students had a chance to be a part of that!

It is easy for alumnae to sponsor an intern: just call Director of Career Services Barbara Rowan at (912) 757-5216 and tell her about your interest. And if you'd like to participate by offering a Wesleyan intern housing during her assignment, that's an option too.

Alumnae Club News

Atlanta

In August, the Atlanta Club honored area first-year students and their mothers with a tea hosted by Laura Sullivan Barkley '68 at her home in Vinings. New students had the opportunity to network with current students and with alumnae. Atlanta Club President Sally Sanders Jones '82 welcomed guests including Cathy Coxey Snow '71, director of alumnae affairs, and Betty Tapley from the Wesleyan Alumnae Office, to the club's first official event of the year. Allison Wohlbruck '94 is admissions representative for the Atlanta area.

Macon

Middle Georgia area first-year students and their mothers, transfer students, and Encore students gathered at the Sidney Lanier Cottage for an August tea hosted by the Macon Club. Lynn Lasseter Heard '87, president of the Macon Club, greeted new and current students and alumnae, as did Wesleyan President Bob Ackerman. May Ackerman (honorary) '94, admissions representative Annette Nassir '94, and Cathy Snow joined club members in welcoming students to Wesleyan.

Savannah

Ushering in a new year of club activities with a "Welcome to Wesleyan Coffee" for new students and their mothers, members of the Savannah Club met with guests at the Gingerbread House in historic Savannah. Savannah Club President Susan Wyllys Wallace '72 welcomed new and current students and alumnae who were delighted to meet with members of Wesleyan's Class of 2000.

Cathy Snow also reminisced with the group about "first-year" expectations and memories.

Our thanks to Rosalind Evans '88 and Sandra Sievers '58, who coordinated plans for the reception.

Washington D.C. Metro Area

It was definitely a "Wesleyan Evening at the Opera" when alumnae, spouses and friends met for a performance of La Bohème presented by Opera International at George Washington University's Lisner Theater in August. Alumnae event coordinators Betty Chih Huang '71 and Helen Harwell Smith '67 also arranged for an after-opera dinner. As members of the advisory board of Opera International, Helen and Betty (board chair) sponsored two Wesleyan students as interns with the opera company this summer.

In September, Dean Priscilla Danheiser addressed club members at a fall luncheon held at The Arts Club of Washington (former home of James Monroe). Mary Catherine Collins O'Kelley '72, vice president of the Wesleyan College Alumnae Association, also spoke to the group (see group photo below). ▼

Alumnae Directories: THEY'RE HERE!

Our Wesleyan College Alumnae Directory project is nearing completion, and soon the directories will be shipped.

The comprehensive new volume is a compilation of the most current data available on over 7,800 Wesleyan College alumnae — data obtained from questionnaire mailings, telephone verification, and/or alumnae records. Now that the editing, proofreading, and printing are almost finished, the distribution of this impressive edition will begin.

The directories are scheduled to be released sometime in early November. All alumnae who reserved a copy of the directory during the verification phase of the project should be receiving their copies two to three weeks after the release. If you have a question concerning an order or if you wish to place an order, please contact our publisher directly at

Customer Service Department
Bernard C. Harris Publishing Co.
16 Koger Center, Suite 103
Norfolk, VA 23502
Phone: 1-800-877-6554

Our new directory is an excellent way of reliving your school days and getting reacquainted with former Wesleyan College classmates. To those who returned their questionnaires, many thanks for your cooperation. And, to those who ordered a copy of the directory — Enjoy!

Alumnae Award Nominations

The Wesleyan Alumnae Association recognizes outstanding alumnae through the Alumnae Awards Program. Awards given include Distinguished Achievement in a Profession and Distinguished Service to the Community, to the Church, or to Wesleyan College. In 1990, the Association added the Young Alumna Award to recognize outstanding achievement within the first ten years after college. The Association honors individuals who make exceptional contributions to the college and its alumnae through the Valeria McCullough Murphey Award established in 1989. Awards are announced at the Annual Meeting during Alumnae Weekend.

It's time now to make nominations for the 1997 awards. Nomination forms are available from the Alumnae Office; the deadline for nominations is January 10, 1997.

New Faculty and Staff

Wesleyan welcomes a talented and enthusiastic group of professionals to campus this fall. Among new faculty, Barbara Burgess, visiting assistant professor of theatre, earned an M.F.A. in directing from Illinois State University and a B.A. in English and drama from Potsdam College. She taught at Kutztown University, California University of Pennsylvania, and Potsdam College. Her directing experience includes work with Music Theatre North's Young Company, the California University of Pennsylvania, Potsdam College, Balliwick Repertory Theatre, and the Chicago Dramatist Workshop. She choreographed for Steppenwolf Theatre Company, SUNY Plattsburgh, St. Lawrence University, and Clarkson University, and directed costume design for Steppenwolf, the Chicago Dramatist Workshop, and the Illinois Shakespeare Festival.

Barbara Donovan, visiting instructor of political science, is a Ph.D. candidate in the Department of Government at Georgetown University. Her major field is comparative politics with specialization in European politics. Her M.A. is in Eastern European Area Studies from the School of Slavonic and East European Studies at the University of London. She was a Teaching Fellow and adjunct professor at Georgetown and served as senior research analyst for Radio Free Europe in Munich.

Jim Ferrari, assistant professor of biology, received the Ph.D. in ecology from the University of Minnesota and an A.B. in biology and Northern studies at Middlebury College. He taught at Earlham College and at the University of Minnesota and served as a volunteer biologist for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in the Alaska Peninsula National Wildlife Refuge.

David Hitchcock, assistant professor of language, expects to complete the Ph.D. degree in Hispanic literature at Cornell this month. His M.A. in Spanish is from Middlebury College, and his B.A. is from Hamilton College. He taught at Westminster School in Connecticut and was a teaching assistant at Cornell. He is particularly interested in 19th- and 20th-century Peninsular literature, contemporary Spanish-American literature, dramatic and narrative theory, and Hispanic culture.

Mary Hoak rejoins the Wesleyan community as visiting instructor in modern language. She is a Ph.D. candidate in the Modern Language program at the University of Tennessee. She earned an M.A. degree in French from Middlebury College and an M.A. in German from the University of Georgia. She completed her undergraduate work at Mercer in French and history, and French is her second concentration for her Ph.D. She taught at Wesleyan during the 1989-90 academic year and has taught at Georgia Tech, Ohio State and the University of Georgia as a teaching assistant.

Jane Richards, Director of the Library, earned a master's degree in librarianship from Emory University and a bachelor's degree in chemistry from North Georgia College. Richards has more than seven years of experience in academic libraries. Originally from Eastman, Georgia, she has worked at the libraries of Georgia State University, Clayton State College, and the Atlanta campus of Mercer University, and most recently at the DeKalb County Public Library.

Kevin Schilbrack, visiting assistant professor of religious studies and philosophy, received the Ph.D. and M.A. degrees from the University of Chicago Divinity School. He completed his undergraduate work in philosophy at Rollins College. He has been a full-time adjunct professor at Florida International University since 1994, and this summer he was a Fellow for an NEH summer seminar at Brown University.

Three new full-time professionals have begun work in Student Life.

Erin Confer, director of student activities, earned an M.S. in college student personnel administration at Indiana University in Bloomington. Her B.S. degree is in psychology with minors in sociology and English literature. She served as assistant coordinator for a co-educational residence center of 1000 students, advising five student government boards and student government and adjudicating residence hall policy violations. She served as an intern in residence life at Dickinson College, completed a Union Board practicum at Indiana Memorial Union, and programmed for student and parent orientation programs at the University of Pittsburgh.

Tracy McFarland, director of residence life, received an M.S. in student personnel administration from SUNY Buffalo and a B.A. in communication from SUNY Geneseo. She has served as coordinator for residential life at Saint Leo College in Florida and as an area director for the department of residence life and Panhellenic advisor for the department of student activities at the University of Tampa. She has been a hall director at Rochester Institute of Technology, an instructor for the academic skills course at the University of Tampa and for a seminar in student development and leadership at Saint Leo.

Barbara Rowan, Wesleyan's new full-time director of career planning and internship services, is completing an M.Ed. at Mercer University. She received the B.A. in mathematics and English from Malone College. Since 1993, she has been director of career services for the Mercer University School of Law.

Four new full-time admissions representatives began work at Wesleyan this fall.

Jamie Christie, formerly a hotel sales manager with the Holiday Inn Macon Conference Center, earned a bachelor's degree in business administration from Shepherd College in Shepherdstown, West Virginia. She is originally from Charleston, West Virginia.

Annette Nassir '94, formerly a newspaper reporter for the Lake Oswego Review and West Linn Tidings in Portland, Oregon, has an A.B. in history and sociology from Wesleyan. Nassir is originally from Gainesville, Florida and Johnstown, Pennsylvania.

Lizzie Wahab '91, formerly a research chemist with Rich Products Corporation in Buffalo, New York, holds an A.B. in biology from Wesleyan and a master's degree in nutritional toxicology from SUNY Buffalo, where she is now a Ph.D. candidate. She and her husband, Faisal Ahmed, moved to Macon in September. Wahab is originally from Dhaka, Bangladesh.

J. Donald Williams, formerly an admissions representative with Wheeling Jesuit University in Wheeling, West Virginia, holds an M.B.A. from Wheeling Jesuit and a bachelor's degree in business from Mount Union College in Alliance, Ohio. Williams is originally from East Liverpool, Ohio.

In addition, Wesleyan has added Rob Brunel to its full-time coaching staff, as head soccer coach. Formerly coach of the First Presbyterian Day School's varsity boys' and girls' soccer teams, Brunel is originally from Macon and holds a bachelor's degree from LaGrange College in LaGrange, Georgia.

Letters to the Editor

GEORGIA COLLEGE scholar David Ezell is seeking information about Wesleyan's role in the Atlanta premiere of the film "Gone with the Wind" in 1939, for a historical article on the subject. He would be pleased to hear from any Wesleyan alumnae (especially anyone who served as one of the hostesses for the event). According to Mr. Ezell, the following news item ran several days before the film's December 15 opening:

While the [Ga. Tech] hosts traveled less than five minutes, the hostesses spent a little over two hours to reach the theater. Wesleyan College in Macon, Georgia, supplied all the hostesses for the evening. The Alumnae of the school requested the honor of serving before the film had been made.

They were in touch with Selznick International for almost four years, to insure their school would have a part in the premiere. (Historic College to Furnish Hostesses," Sunday American, 3 December 1939.)

You may reach Mr. Ezell at: Department of History, Georgia College & State University, Milledgeville, GA 31061. He will appreciate any help.

"I never have received an Alumnae Award," says Margaret Manson Buckel '50, the subject of our Alumna Profile in Wesleyan Magazine Spring 1996. "though who knows — maybe I will someday!" Our apologies, Margaret, for jumping the gun. Margaret also corrected our information on her school, which comprises grades pre-K through 5.

The staff of Wesleyan Magazine thank those of you who have made generous compliments and helpful suggestions. A number of you have written, and we'll be running some of your letters — including responses to our STUNT story from Spring '96 — in upcoming issues.

The following Atlanta Journal-Constitution column by Dave Kindred was originally printed on July 18, 1996. It is reprinted here with permission, as our Alumna Profile.

Torch reignites Olympic spirit

NEWNAN — Twenty years ago, Sally Bowen ('47) went to Olympia. Now Olympia has come to her.

Olympia is the country town in Greece which 2,772 years ago decided to have a track meet. It became the first Olympics.

Sally Bowen had earned a master's degree in the Greek classics. So she flew to Greece and drove to Olympia.

There she put her foot on a piece of marble said to have been a starting block for races. She even sprinted a ways herself. She also stood where they light the Olympic flame every four years.

That flame, on its way to the Atlanta games, stopped in her hometown Wednesday (July 17, 1996).

The folks organizing the flame's reception needed someone to make the standard speech welcoming the flame and explaining its symbolism. Norma Haynes, who headed up Newnan's volunteers, said, "Miss Sally's it."

When someone said the speech usually is made by an official of the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games, Norma Haynes had something to say about that.

Here is the complete text of her reply:

"Over my dead body."

With this explanation:

"If an ACOG person does that speech, won't be anybody doing nothing but wondering when he'll shut up. If Miss Sally does it, it will be heard in every corner of Newnan and Coweta County."

They love Miss Sally here. She's 70, a retired schoolteacher, a city treasure. She remembers a time when the iceman came to her house in his horse-drawn wagon.

She saw cotton piled high on the court square. She ate mayonnaise sandwiches for a nickel at the Lee-King pharmacy.

She taught Latin for 45 years, even to Lewis Grizzard. She taught it so well that the late Journal-Constitution columnist once proved to doubters the richness of his education by shouting, "Quam de eis Canibus," Latin for "How 'bout them Dawgs."

So Norma Haynes, herself a Miss Sally student, helped the old teacher onto the stage Wednesday morning. Miss Sally needed help because she has cancer. After five chemotherapy treatments, she soon will begin an oral medicine. She says doctors hope the medicine gets any cancer left.

As Haynes came off the stage, a tear at each eye, she said, "This is the proudest moment of my life."

Kids climbed trees to see the flame arrive. Daddies raised babies to their shoulders. In the little city park, maybe a thousand people stood in scorching sunlight and they saw Sally Bowen wearing red, white and blue with stars and they heard the speech ACOG officials have made all over the country.

Only, this time, Sally Bowen did it. "Behold the flame," she said. She spoke of fire and passion, hopes and dreams, power and glory. And when she spoke of "the spirit that inspires us to raise heroes on our shoulders and shed tears at their triumphs," some of us thought how curious that we would go looking for heroes when they walk among us, teaching Latin.

Sally will celebrate her 50th Wesleyan reunion next April.

Dear Wesleyannes,

The report for the Loyalty Fund brings good news and bad news. The good news first (and it is very good) — we exceeded our goal of $300,000, with a final total of $307,358.28! That dollar amount is important to help insure the future of Wesleyan. One of the first things I learned is that our contributions are not for luxuries and extras — they keep the doors of Wesleyan open. Thank you for hearing the need. Special thanks to the liaisons, as you have served as the communicating link between us and our alma mater.

Now for the bad news. We did not come close to the percentage of contributors we needed. We had set our goal at 31%; however, we reached only 27.8%. The percentage means a great deal when it comes time to apply for grants from foundations and financial help from the business community. It is only logical for such organizations to ask for evidence that Wesleyan's alumnae feel that the institution deserves money so that it can continue its tradition.

By sending some contribution, whatever you are able to give, you are voting that Wesleyan should have a future — at least that is how it looks to foundations and the business community. Please keep in mind that "no contribution" is a double negative: you miss the chance to help out with much-needed funds for expenses, but also, by not being counted among the percentage of donors, you may lessen Wesleyan's chances of obtaining funds from outside resources.

This has been a delightful two years. It has given me the opportunity to be on campus several times and see the exciting things that are happening. I am more aware than ever that my Wesleyan experience did not end the day I graduated. My Loyalty Fund gift will be a thank-you for the difference Wesleyan made in my life during the preceding year, knowing that I am still building on the foundation that Wesleyan provided forty years ago.

Sincerely,

Linda Stoner Winslett '56

Dear Wesleyannes,

I echo the words of Linda Stoner Winslett, our 1995–1996 Loyalty Fund Chair, in thanking each of you for your contribution(s) to our Loyalty Fund.

I hope you have come home to Wesleyan on occasion and let the nostalgia flood your soul. Our alma mater is still very beautiful and although she is the oldest, she is very much alive. She continues to give her daughters the very best, while holding on to the rapidly changing times and ever looking forward to a future filled with opportunities for us, her beloved daughters.

What, then, will we do for her? My prayer is that every single one of us who ever walked these hallowed halls will send her a gift of love and loyalty today.

Yes, we know our alma mater (foster mother) will always be the oldest. It is up to us to keep her the best.

May you receive a rich blessing from remembering Wesleyan with a gift to the Annual Loyalty Fund.

Warm regards,

Mary Eva DuBose '52

Love x 5

Wesleyan Annual Fund leadership sought a way to honor alumnae who support Wesleyan year in and year out. In 1994, we devised a program known as "Love x 5" to recognize all alumnae who have made a gift to Wesleyan for at least the past five consecutive years.

The hearts ♥ by the names of class donors signify gifts to the Alumnae Loyalty Fund for the last five or more years.

The recognition extended to those listed in this publication is one small way to thank the many contributors to Wesleyan College between July 1, 1995, and June 30, 1996. An asterisk indicates a donor deceased before June 30, 1996. Every attempt was made to ensure accuracy, but it is possible that some errors may have occurred, and we apologize for any inconvenience such errors may cause.

We encourage you to call any corrections to our attention by notifying Lynn Shields, Director of Development, Wesleyan College, 4760 Forsyth Road, Macon, Georgia, 31210-4460. Thank you.

Please note that publication of the names of contributors is strictly for the purpose of grateful acknowledgement by Wesleyan College; no other use of these lists is permitted.

Wesleyan Present Tense — and Future

WHAT VALUES, KNOWLEDGE, EXPERIENCES, AND EMOTIONS WILL BE IMPORTANT for our newest first-year students to live successfully in a new age, and can we practice these values and have these experiences at Wesleyan? These are the questions I posed at Opening Convocation to the Wesleyan community and specifically to the Wesleyan Class of 2000 — our largest first-year class in twenty years. These first-year students represent our learning community's link to a new century and a new millenium. I suggested to them that in the 21st century we will value integrity, connecting to others, civic responsibility, commitment, learning for learning's sake, and confidence in the self. And I answered my second question with a resounding Yes.

*by Priscilla Ruth Danheiser
Dean of the College*

My confidence in that answer comes from looking at the present Wesleyan, where students live within a community of honor, with a sense of integrity and shared purpose. As a liberal arts college, Wesleyan has always been committed to preparing students for a lifetime of learning in a changing world.

My confidence also comes from the whirlwind of progress we have experienced at Wesleyan in recent months. This progress has resulted in a flourishing academic and co-curricular program this fall.

When the 1996–97 academic year began this August, our first-year students found their computers already set up in their rooms and connected to the Internet. 🌟 Residents of Wortham Hall moved into newly air-conditioned rooms. 🌟 New lab expansions were ready to support study in the natural and physical sciences: biologist Wanda Schroeder, for instance, came to us last year with an NIH grant and the funding to equip an extraordinary genetics laboratory. Barry Rhoades now has a fine physiology lab. James Ferrari, new to Wesleyan this year, has an outstanding lab that includes back campus and Foster Lake as extensions of the botany experience. 🌟 At the same time we are upgrading chemistry and physics laboratories and our experimental psychology program with funding from another NIH grant awarded to psychologist Jim Rowan.

🌟 GALILEO (Georgia Library Learning Online), the statewide online information network, is now accessible in our library and from every computer on campus; work is under way toward full computerization of the library, scheduled for completion in fall 1997. 🌟 We have launched a graduate program, the Master of Arts in Teaching, that builds on our strengths in the Education Department and meets a vital national need for master teachers in math and science. 🌟 One of our faculty members, Hilary Kight, received one of the state's first Governor's Teachers Fellowships, to pursue postdoctoral work in mathematics and women's studies. 🌟 These accomplishments represent but a few of the many.

🌟 Several new faculty have begun their Wesleyan experience this fall, bringing credentials from institutions across the country: Cornell, Chicago, Georgetown, Tennessee, and Minnesota, for instance (see feature story, page CN7). Each new faculty member was selected first on his or her ability to teach, to engage and challenge our students. 🌟 We recently named three of our veteran faculty members to the college's newest endowed chairs, made possible by the recent alumnae campaign: Marcile Taylor to the Knox Chair in Humanities, Charles Wynn to the Wesleyan Alumnae Chair in Education, and William Curry to the Eleanor McDonald Storza Chair in Social Science.

Of course, progress does not end there. We are currently in the midst of revamping our general education curriculum, to make our liberal arts foundation more learner-centered and participation-driven. You will hear more about this undertaking as we complete it this year.

As I told the Wesleyan community at Opening Convocation, I believe Wesleyan has an unrealized destiny. We have the potential to become the consummate community of learners. As we move closer to the year 2000, I am proud that we are all about the business of fulfilling that destiny. W

"The mere thought of crossing into a new millenium, approaching a new frontier, conjures up all sorts of images for me."
